Dear Hiring Manager,

The Litigation Legal Assistant role at your client's Bexleyheath firm is the kind of position my background directly supports. My year at BCLP's disputes teams, combined with my current advisory work at Citizens Advice, has given me hands-on experience with the practical side of litigation support, and I want to build on that within a busy, varied caseload.

At BCLP I supported both an international arbitration and a real estate disputes team over twelve months. In the arbitration seat I became the only junior on the matter shortly before a major deadline, which meant tracking outstanding documents, coordinating with an external translator, liaising directly with the client and helping ensure submissions were filed on time. In the real estate disputes seat I prepared electronic hearing bundles, assisted with skeleton arguments, conducted research on easements and leasehold issues, and managed case files across several matters with competing deadlines using iManage. A partner and associate told me my contribution was comparable to that of a newly qualified solicitor. That feedback reflected the kind of organised, close-attention-to-detail work that litigation support requires.

At Citizens Advice I currently manage matters from first interview through to submission. I take detailed factual statements, establish chronologies, identify evidential issues, draft correspondence and maintain confidential case records. Many of the clients I advise are in difficult circumstances, so clear and careful communication matters as much as the paperwork behind it. That combination of client-facing work and file management is directly relevant to supporting fee earners on a varied caseload.

The Bexleyheath location works well for me geographically, and the chance to work across a broad range of litigation matters is what makes this role appealing rather than a narrower specialism at this stage of my career. I would gain exposure to different procedural contexts while contributing reliably to the team from the outset.

Yours sincerely,

Maria Silva
