Dear Hiring Manager,

The Legal Team Coordinator role at Pilgrims Europe appeals to me because it sits at the intersection of legal operations, governance and data privacy, which are areas I have worked across in different settings and want to develop further in a commercial environment.

At Bryan Cave Leighton Paisner, where I completed a year-long placement split across international arbitration and real estate disputes, I handled the kind of varied legal support work this role describes. In the arbitration team I maintained structured electronic case files, tracked procedural deadlines, coordinated documents across multiple contributors and liaised with the client and an external translator to gather required materials, all under time pressure before a significant submission deadline. In the real estate team I managed large volumes of documents across several matters simultaneously, assisted with court filings and handled matter opening and closure administration. Both rotations required me to stay organised across competing priorities and communicate clearly with fee earners and external parties.

My data privacy experience is also directly relevant. At Q-Legal I managed a data privacy matter for a data-driven start-up from initial instruction through to a formal written advice letter, researching UK GDPR and Data Protection Act 2018 obligations, including children's personal data and adtech. Before that, at Adobe, I reviewed confidentiality and data-processing provisions across licensing agreements, researched cross-border personal data transfer requirements and communicated findings to legal, sales and international business teams. My LLM dissertation also examined GDPR development across jurisdictions. Taken together, these give me a grounding in privacy compliance that should be useful in supporting the team's privacy activities from day one.

What makes this role specifically interesting to me is its breadth. Supporting governance, company secretarial work, project coordination and privacy activities in one role gives real visibility into how a legal function operates as a business unit, which is something I want to understand better as I develop my career. Pilgrims Europe's scale and cross-border operations mean that work will have genuine commercial significance rather than being routine administration.

I am available to start with reasonable notice and would welcome the opportunity to discuss the role further.

Yours sincerely,
Maria Silva
