Dear Hiring Manager,

The Legal Assistant role at Media Concierge appeals to me because it offers direct involvement in a wide range of commercial legal work inside a large, privately owned business, and my background in commercial contract review, dispute support and client communication maps well onto in-house legal support work of this kind.

At BCLP I spent six months in Real Estate Disputes and six months in International Arbitration. In both rotations I managed high volumes of documents across competing deadlines: tracking procedural timetables, preparing hearing bundles, maintaining structured case files on iManage and coordinating with external parties. Shortly before a significant arbitration deadline I became the only junior supporting the team, which meant independently prioritising outstanding tasks and coordinating document logistics to ensure on-time submission. That kind of pressure sharpened my ability to stay organised without needing close supervision, which is directly relevant to supporting a busy in-house team.

Before BCLP, my internship at Adobe gave me a different kind of exposure to commercial legal work. I reviewed and amended software licensing agreements, assessed data-processing and confidentiality provisions against UK and EU GDPR requirements, and liaised with sales, legal and international business teams to resolve contractual queries. I also prepared an internal presentation on breach-of-contract risks and mitigation measures. Working in-house taught me that legal support in that environment means translating legal risk into something commercially useful for non-lawyers, and that is a skill I have continued to develop at Citizens Advice, where I regularly explain procedural requirements and statutory obligations to clients in plain terms.

What makes this role a logical next step for me is the breadth it offers. Supporting a group of businesses across multiple sectors means the legal questions will vary considerably, and the opportunity to build familiarity with a business from the inside appeals to me more than rotating through short external placements. My experience spans contract review, dispute preparation, regulatory research and client communication, and I am confident I could contribute usefully from the outset while continuing to develop within the team.

Yours sincerely,
Maria Silva
