Dear Hiring Manager,

The Legal Assistant role at Media Concierge is a genuine next step for me. Working in-house for a privately owned group with operations across the UK and Ireland means direct exposure to the legal needs of a real business rather than supporting one side of a dispute, and that shift in perspective is something I want to develop at this stage of my career.

My most directly relevant experience is my year at Bryan Cave Leighton Paisner, where I supported live matters across international arbitration and real estate disputes. In the arbitration team I became the only junior on a complex investment case shortly before a significant submission deadline. That meant coordinating documents across the team, tracking outstanding actions and liaising with the client on required materials, all while managing my own drafting tasks. The partner and associate I worked with told me my performance was comparable to a newly qualified solicitor. In the real estate disputes team I reviewed documents, prepared electronic hearing bundles, assisted with skeleton arguments and maintained matter records on iManage across several concurrent files. Both rotations required careful file management and the ability to prioritise under pressure without dropping detail.

At Citizens Advice, where I currently advise clients on welfare, employment, housing and debt matters, I manage each matter from first interview through to submission. That means drafting correspondence, preparing document schedules and maintaining confidential records to deadline. The client base includes people in difficult circumstances, so translating complex procedural and legal requirements into clear practical guidance is a constant part of the role. That experience of explaining legal positions clearly to non-lawyers transfers directly to in-house work, where the legal team exists to support people across the wider business.

Media Concierge's scale and the breadth of a diversified group mean the legal team will face a genuinely varied workload across commercial contracts, regulatory compliance and operational matters. My background across disputes, data privacy at Q-Legal and contract review at Adobe means I have handled that kind of variety before and can move between different subject areas without losing accuracy.

I am based in the Reading area and am happy to commute to Central London. I would welcome the opportunity to discuss the role further.

Yours sincerely,
Maria Silva
