I am applying for the Health & Safety Advisor role advertised through Perfect Placement, based in Reading, Berkshire.

I should be transparent at the outset: my background is in law and paralegal work rather than dedicated health and safety practice. I have not held a Health & Safety Advisor role, and I do not hold NEBOSH or IOSH qualifications. On that basis, I am not a strong match for this position as described, and I would not want to waste your time or mine by presenting my profile as something it is not.

If, however, the role has a legal, compliance, regulatory, or advisory dimension — for example, supporting health and safety investigations, reviewing documentation, advising on regulatory obligations, or liaising with regulators — I would be glad to discuss whether my disputes and regulatory experience could be relevant in a different capacity.

My background includes a year at Bryan Cave Leighton Paisner supporting complex litigation and arbitration, followed by client-facing advisory work at Citizens Advice and Q-Legal. I am experienced in reviewing evidence, identifying regulatory and legal risks, drafting procedural documents, and translating complex rules into clear practical guidance for clients. I am commercially aware, detail-focused, and used to working across competing deadlines on sensitive matters.

If this specific vacancy is not the right fit, I would welcome the chance to discuss any paralegal, legal compliance, or regulatory advisory roles your clients may have in the Reading or wider Berkshire area, which is where I am based and actively seeking opportunities.

Thank you for considering this.
