I am applying for the Legal Cashier role at Xhen Associates Ltd. While my background is in legal practice rather than legal cashiership, I want to be straightforward: I am a paralegal with disputes and legal advisory experience, not a qualified accountant or experienced legal cashier. If the role requires that specific background as a firm prerequisite, I would not want to waste your time.

That said, if you are open to candidates who bring strong financial accuracy, document discipline and law-firm familiarity from a different route, I would welcome the conversation.

Throughout my placement year at Bryan Cave Leighton Paisner, I worked within structured matter-management and finance-adjacent processes: tracking deadlines and costs, maintaining organised electronic files via iManage, assisting with matter opening and closure, and preparing cost comparisons across competing matters. I am accustomed to working to firm financial and procedural timelines, handling confidential records carefully and flagging discrepancies early.

At Citizens Advice East Berkshire, I manage client matters end-to-end — preparing document schedules, maintaining accurate case records and meeting submission deadlines — in an environment where accuracy and accountability are non-negotiable. I apply the same discipline at Q-Legal, where I produced formal advice letters under solicitor supervision to a set deadline.

I am based in Maidenhead, so the location suits me well, and I am available for a permanent, full-time role immediately.

I recognise this role typically sits with candidates from a legal cashiership or accountancy background, and I would not overstate my fit. But if you are open to a motivated candidate with genuine law-firm experience, strong attention to detail and a track record of stable, accountable work, I would be glad to discuss further.

Thank you for your consideration.
