Dear Hiring Manager,

I am applying for the Conveyancing Paralegal role at your Reading firm, advertised through Reed. My background in property disputes, document management and client-facing legal work makes me well placed to contribute to your Residential Property department from an early stage.

During my year at Bryan Cave Leighton Paisner, six months of which were spent in the Real Estate Disputes team, I supported hearing preparation across landlord and tenant disputes, rights of light, easements and leasehold matters. I prepared electronic bundles, assisted with skeleton arguments and court materials, conducted legal and factual research, and managed large volumes of confidential documents across several competing matters simultaneously. That experience gave me a practical grounding in property law and in the discipline required to move files forward accurately and on time.

In my current role at Citizens Advice East Berkshire I manage matters end to end: taking detailed client instructions, preparing applications and document schedules, drafting correspondence and meeting submission deadlines. I regularly advise clients on procedural requirements and translate complex rules into clear, practical guidance — skills that translate directly to residential conveyancing, where clients often need careful handling at significant moments.

I am also familiar with the commercial dimension of property work. At Adobe I reviewed and amended contracts, identified risk provisions and liaised across teams to reconcile legal and commercial objectives — experience that reinforces the commercial awareness I would bring to a transactional caseload.

I am drawn to this firm's reputation for genuine progression and a supportive environment. I am ambitious, detail-oriented and ready to take on hands-on responsibility within a thriving Residential Property team.

I would welcome the opportunity to discuss the role further.

Yours sincerely,
Maria Fernanda Silva
