Dear Hiring Manager,

The paralegal role at Nath Solicitors appeals to me because my background sits squarely across the two areas the role centres on: commercial contracts and litigation support. I have practical experience in both, and I am looking to build on that in a smaller firm where the work is varied and the contribution of each team member is more visible.

At BCLP, where I completed a year-long placement split across international arbitration and real estate disputes, litigation support was the core of my day-to-day work. In the arbitration team I prepared procedural submissions and sections of the Claimant's memorial, drafted procedural orders and procedural histories, organised evidence for submission, and maintained structured electronic case files with close attention to deadlines. In the disputes team I worked directly on hearing preparation, reviewing documents, compiling electronic bundles, and assisting with skeleton arguments and court materials. When I became the only junior supporting the arbitration team shortly before a significant procedural deadline, I coordinated outstanding documents and tracked actions across the matter to ensure submission on time. That environment gave me a clear understanding of what accurate, well-organised litigation support actually requires under pressure.

On the contracts side, at Adobe I reviewed and amended software licensing agreements, assessed data-processing and confidentiality provisions against UK and EU GDPR requirements, and communicated proposed amendments to sales and international business teams. More recently at Citizens Advice I draft correspondence, prepare applications and document schedules, and advise clients on procedural requirements across a range of matters, always managing competing deadlines across an active caseload. While I have not yet used Leap, I am familiar with iManage for matter management and electronic court filing portals, and I am confident I can transfer those habits to a new system quickly.

I want to work in a smaller firm because the work is less siloed. At BCLP I noticed how much more I learned when I was close to the whole life of a matter rather than one narrow part of it. A role where I am contributing to both drafting and litigation preparation, and where the team is compact enough that the quality of my work is directly visible, is where I expect to develop most quickly. That is what draws me to this position.

Yours sincerely,
Maria Silva
