Dear Hiring Manager,

The paralegal role at the global media company you are recruiting for appeals to me because my background in commercial contracts, legal drafting and document review maps closely onto what the role requires, and the in-house, fast-paced environment is one I am actively seeking.

My most directly relevant experience is my year at Bryan Cave Leighton Paisner, where I worked across two rotations handling significant volumes of time-sensitive work. In the international arbitration team I drafted procedural documents, reviewed and organised evidence for a complex investment arbitration, and became the primary junior on the team shortly before a major submission deadline. That meant coordinating outstanding documents, tracking actions across a large file and helping ensure everything was filed on time, all without close supervision. In the real estate disputes team I prepared electronic hearing bundles, assisted with skeleton arguments and managed document-heavy matters across competing deadlines. Both rotations required the kind of file management, deadline discipline and drafting accuracy that a fast-paced commercial paralegal role depends on.

I have also handled contracts directly. At Adobe I reviewed and amended software licensing agreements, assessed contractual risks and identified provisions requiring legal input before flagging them to stakeholders. I also reviewed confidentiality and data-processing clauses, researching cross-border data transfer requirements under UK and EU GDPR. That combination of commercial contracts work and research under time pressure is close to what this role describes, particularly the licensing and content distribution element given the overlap with IP and permissions-based agreements.

My Citizens Advice work has added something different: the ability to manage a full caseload independently, maintaining records, meeting deadlines and translating complex legal positions into clear written and verbal communication. Managing matters from instruction through to submission, often across several files at once, has made me comfortable operating without hand-holding in a small team.

I am looking for an in-house role where I can work across the commercial contracts cycle rather than in a purely advisory capacity, and a media company's legal function, where content, licensing and IP agreements are central to the business, is a good fit for where I want to develop. I would welcome the opportunity to discuss the role further.

Yours sincerely,
Maria Silva
