Dear Hiring Manager,

I am applying for the Patent Paralegal role at G2 Legal because IP formalities work requires the same disciplined file management, deadline tracking and procedural accuracy I developed during my year at BCLP and in my current role at Citizens Advice, and I want to build on that foundation in a specialist legal environment.

At BCLP I was the sole junior supporting an international arbitration team in the weeks before a significant submission deadline. That meant tracking all outstanding documents, coordinating with an external translator, liaising with the client on required materials and maintaining the structured electronic case files the team depended on. When the submission went in on time, it was because every procedural step had been recorded and followed through. That kind of end-to-end formalities management, where missing one step has real consequences, is directly transferable to managing US patent prosecution workflows and deadlines.

In my current role at Citizens Advice I manage matters from initial client interview through to submission: drafting correspondence, preparing document schedules, maintaining confidential records and meeting fixed regulatory deadlines across a caseload covering welfare, housing and employment matters. Working across different legal areas at once has made me careful about treating each matter's procedural requirements on their own terms rather than assuming one process works the same as another, which matters when US patent formalities follow rules that differ from UK or European practice.

I do not have prior patent-specific experience, and I want to be straightforward about that. What I do have is a consistent record of picking up unfamiliar procedural frameworks quickly, keeping files accurate under pressure and communicating clearly with clients about requirements and next steps. I am also a motivated self-directed learner: after attending an A&O Shearman open day that introduced me to how different legal disciplines operate in practice, I completed a Coursera course on private equity to understand the commercial context behind the legal work, which reflects how I approach any new area.

I am drawn to this role because specialist IP practices reward precisely the skills I have spent the past three years developing, and a US patent formalities focus would give me a clear, substantive area to build expertise in.

Yours sincerely,
Maria Silva
