Dear Hiring Manager,

The Antitrust Paralegal role at this international law firm appeals to me because antitrust disputes sit at the intersection of procedural rigor and substantive legal complexity, and my background in preparing litigation materials, conducting legal research and managing case files at BCLP maps directly onto the responsibilities you have described.

During my year at BCLP, I spent six months in Real Estate Disputes preparing electronic hearing bundles, assisting with skeleton arguments and coordinating court filings across several matters running simultaneously. Shortly before a significant submission deadline in the International Arbitration team, I became the only junior supporting the case, tracking outstanding actions and coordinating documents to ensure the procedural submission went in on time. Both rotations taught me how to handle large document sets accurately under time pressure, which is exactly what bundle preparation and court filing require in a busy antitrust practice.

The legal research side of this role is also where I have built consistent experience. At BCLP I researched procedural and substantive issues across arbitration and property disputes; at Q-Legal I led the research for a data privacy advisory matter from instruction through to a formal written advice letter, mapping statutory obligations and identifying compliance risks. At Citizens Advice I regularly research complex points of welfare, housing and employment law to resolve evidential gaps in live matters. Across all three settings I have had to identify the relevant legal framework quickly, assess which issues actually matter, and present findings in a form that is immediately usable by the supervising lawyer or the client.

The fixed-term structure with strong scope for extension reflects the kind of role I am looking for: a setting where I can take on real responsibility from the outset and where continued contribution is recognised. An antitrust practice working on competition proceedings would develop my understanding of regulatory litigation in a direction that genuinely interests me, building on the procedural and dispute-preparation skills I have developed over the past few years.

I would be glad to discuss my application further at a time that suits you.

Yours sincerely,
Maria Silva
