Dear Hiring Manager,

I am applying for the Junior Legal PA role at Larbey Evans Ltd because it offers direct exposure to a professional legal environment, and my background supporting fee earners at BCLP across two practice areas has given me a practical grounding in exactly the kind of administrative and organisational work this role involves.

During my year at BCLP, I supported both an international arbitration team and a real estate disputes team. In the arbitration seat, I maintained structured electronic case files in iManage, tracked procedural deadlines across a complex investment arbitration, and coordinated document management as the team approached a significant submission deadline. In real estate disputes, I prepared electronic hearing bundles, assisted with court materials, handled court filings and managed large volumes of confidential documents across several matters running at once. Both rotations required close attention to detail, careful prioritisation and the kind of reliable day-to-day organisation that fee earners depend on from a PA or legal support role.

At Citizens Advice, where I currently advise clients on welfare, housing and employment matters, I manage the full administrative lifecycle of each case: taking detailed factual records, drafting correspondence, preparing document schedules and maintaining confidential files to deadline. Communicating clearly with clients about procedural steps, and translating requirements into plain terms, is a central part of the role. That experience of managing client-facing communication alongside case administration directly maps to the kind of support a Junior Legal PA is expected to provide.

I am drawn to this role specifically because moving into a Legal PA position at an international law firm is a logical next step from the practical legal support work I have done at BCLP and in my current advisory role. I want to build on that foundation in a structured, professional environment where I can develop the skills associated with supporting senior lawyers consistently over time, rather than in a short placement context. The City location and the firm's international scope are also a good fit with the disputes and cross-border work I have most enjoyed so far.

Yours sincerely,
Maria Silva
