Dear Hiring Manager,

I am applying for the Trade Mark Paralegal role at G2 Legal because intellectual property is an area I have been building toward, and the case management and client-facing responsibilities described in the ad map closely onto what I have been doing in practice.

At BCLP I spent a year supporting complex commercial proceedings across two teams. In international arbitration, I tracked procedural deadlines, coordinated documents across a multi-party investment dispute, and maintained structured electronic case files throughout the matter. When I became the only junior supporting the team ahead of a key submission deadline, I coordinated outstanding actions across the team and helped ensure the memorial was filed on time. That required close attention to detail under real pressure, which is the kind of file management trade mark work depends on, whether monitoring renewal and opposition deadlines or maintaining accurate records across a portfolio of client marks.

At Citizens Advice I manage matters from initial client interview through to submission, drafting correspondence, preparing document schedules and keeping confidential records up to date. I interview clients across a range of subject matters, take detailed factual statements and translate procedural requirements into clear guidance for people who are not familiar with the relevant rules. That client communication side of the role has sharpened how I explain complex processes in plain terms, which I understand is central to client-facing trade mark work, particularly when advising clients on the application process, relative grounds objections or third-party oppositions.

My LLM at Queen Mary covered procedural and evidentiary issues across different jurisdictions, and my dissertation examined how data protection law has developed across legal systems. That comparative, process-focused thinking is something I would bring to understanding the procedural frameworks that govern trade mark prosecution and inter partes proceedings at the UK IPO and EUIPO.

I want to move into intellectual property specifically rather than commercial litigation more broadly because it sits at the intersection of legal process and business identity in a way I find genuinely interesting. I would welcome the chance to develop that interest in a firm that handles IP work across a range of industries.

Yours sincerely,
Maria Silva
